Ike Edges Adlai By One In Preferential Poll

Hectic Campaigning Ends Senior Battle; Al Lamy President

Culminating a week of hectic campaigning, including motorcades, loud speakers, celebrities, banner waving and co-eds, Alfred Lamy was elected to the presidency of the senior class. Elected with Lamy were Andrew Resnisky, as vice-president, Frank A. Merlino, secretary, and John McCarthy treasurer.

Lamy, a graduate of Mt. Pleasant High School in '49, was Junior Class Secretary, Vice-President of the Phi Chi Club, and a member of the Aquatic Friars and Friars Club. He is a social science major. Lamy was opposed by Robert Tiernan and John Martiska.

Resnisky, a political science major, is a graduate of Mt. St. Charles in '49. He is President of the Hartford Club and a member of the Carolan Club. Francis Brown and Henry James, Jr., were the opposing candidates.

Merlino, elected over Jerome Harman and James Neilan for the office of secretary was graduated in '48 from Mt. Pleasant High School. He is a political science major, and is secretary of the Camera Club.

P. C. Radio Program Begins Fourth Week

For the last three weeks the Rev. Joseph U. Bergkamp, O.P., head of the History and Government Department at the college, has been conducting a series of lectures over radio station WPRO. The lecture series started with the topic, "Constitutional Convention" and is now progressing into the subject "History of Presidential Elections."

The program is being held every Monday night from 10:35 to 11:00 p.m. over station WPRO. The program opens with a question period, the questions being inquiries made by the radio audience and asked to Father Bergkamp by several students of the college who are participants. Father Bergkamp then proceeds to his lecture proper with any difficulties being made clear by questions directed at him by the students.

Any student who would like any points on the history of our government clarified should submit his questions to WPRO. Father Bergkamp is well known for his television series on the "American Idea" which was inaugurated last year over the local television outlet.

Congress Refers Attendance Bill To Committee For Study

By Robert E. Finneran

Roger Aubin, President of the Student Congress, presided over the first regular meeting of the student legislative body last Thursday afternoon. The first business taken care of at the meeting was the replacement of vacancies which had been created. Andy Resnisky, Senior class vice-president, was appointed to replace Robert Deasy as Senior delegate, and Gerry Romberg, Sophomore class vice-president, was appointed to replace the vacancy created when Len Riley became president of that class. The appointments were made in conformity with the Student Congress Constitution.

William F. Broderick, Jr., motioned for a roll call of the passive delegates, but since the passive members have no vote, it was decided that a roll should not be taken, and the motion was retracted.

"Who's Who" Committee Picked
Al Lamy, William Conway, and Phil Doherty were appointed to study the "Who's Who" selection.

A proposal for lockers in the business building was passed, 11-0.

A proposal by Richard Daronce and James Marshall for police protection on campus between the hours of 11 p.m., and 6 a.m., was passed and referred to President Aubin for action.

A proposal by William F. Broderick, Jr., to amend the by-laws, stating that a congress member who absents himself from two consecutive meetings without permission shall be expelled, was referred to the Legislative Committee for investigation by a vote of 11-2. Broderick's amendment was met with considerable debate when one portion of the amendment was brought before the house. The portion was concerned with the provision that if a delegate missed two consecutive monthly meetings he should not be allowed to run for any class office. Considerable debate followed, the bill finally being referred to the Legislative Committee.

Questions Are Asked

The meeting was then opened to all those members who were not congress delegates to ask questions on (Continued on Page 4)

Ike Deemed Best, 274-273; But Adlai Is Favored To Win 290-256

General Dwight D. Eisenhower edged Governor Adlai Stevenson by one vote in a Cowl preferential survey taken on the campus last week. On the question, "Whom do you prefer for President?" Eisenhower received 274 votes and his Democratic opponent, 273.

Stevenson, however, easily outdistanced the General on the survey's first question, "Who do you think will win the Presidential Election?" by gathering 290 votes to Eisenhower's 258.

Students from Rhode Island went heavily for the Illinois Governor on this question, whereas those from other states were almost evenly divided between the two nominees.

It was this Rhode Island vote which was responsible for Stevenson's majority.

Many students who personally preferred Eisenhower thought that the Democratic standard bearer would be the next occupant of the White House, which accounts for the considerable discrepancy in the replies to these two queries.

Scandals Have Small Effect

Recent government scandals and charges of wholesale corruption in the Truman Administration will have only a limited effect upon the outcome of this year's presidential, senatorial and congressional elections, according to the majority of the students. The totals are as follows: limited, 348; great deal, 151; and none, 59.

By the overwhelming count of 399 to 144, the students expressed disapproval of our conduct of the Korean War.

The students also opined that Senator Richard Nixon's presence on the Republican ticket will not have an adverse effect on Eisenhower's chances. The vote on this question read 446 to 107.

Foster Is Communist Chief

As regards the question, "Who is the head of the Communist Party in America?" the replies were: Don't Know, 269; William Z. Foster, 98; Gerhardt Eisler, 83; George Sokolsky, 24; Owen Lattimore, 23; and John Foster Dulles, 16. The correct answer is William Z. Foster. Gerhardt Eisler is the only other communist on the list. The Freshmen class had the highest percentage of correct replies to this query.

Under the heading of "College Affairs," four questions were asked. The (Continued on Page 4)

Bloodmobile Visits College Next Month

A Red Cross Bloodmobile will visit P. C. on November 3rd and 6th, Roger Aubin, president of the Student Congress, announced today. The Bloodmobile will be set up in the Harkins Hall Auditorium from 10 a.m., to 3 p.m., on both days to receive blood for our country's soldiers in Korea, Aubin declared.

According to Army regulations, any person between 21 and 59 may donate blood once every two months, with their total donations not to exceed five per year. Persons between the ages of 18 and 21 are required to have the consent of either their parents or guardians before donating blood. Parental consent forms will be distributed shortly.

The entire process of giving blood takes approximately 45 minutes. This includes rest periods before and after the donation. The time needed for the actual giving of blood is five minutes.

"Rocky" To Appear At Forum

Event To Be Held
In Harkins Hall
At 7:45 P. M.

Rocco Marchegiano, more commonly known as heavyweight champion of the world "Rocky" Marciano, will be the panel guest on next Monday's sports forum. The meeting will take place in Harkins Hall Auditorium and will start promptly at 7:45. Two hundred student tickets will be available starting today at the office of Adult Education.

"Rocky," who recently lifted the heavyweight crown from Joe Walcott with one mighty blow, will be in town to referee one of the bouts at the Arena, and thus the early hour for the forum.

Marciano was named athlete of the year in the Hickok poll, results of which were announced Sunday. He received 91 out of 99 first place votes in this poll, thereby achieving the distinction of receiving an almost unanimous vote.

Charles Reynolds, a Providence College graduate, will be chairman of the forum. Mr. Reynolds is past president of the Rhode Island Boxing Commission and a past president of the National Boxing Commission.

Also on the panel will be Mike Thomas, sports writer for the Providence Journal-Bulletin, and Pete Louthis, a member of the Athletic department and a former professional boxer.

The Rev. Aloysius Begley, O.P., will act as moderator on the panel.

Morality Backwards

"Within one-hundred years," says President James Bryant Conant of Harvard, "science will have found a safe contraceptive that can be taken by mouth and the world will have a remedy for overpopulation. Last week British researchers reported an early lead in that direction". This choice bit of news appeared in Time magazine recently. The item went on to say that an extract from a herb known as gromwell when taken by way of the mouth can stop female ovulation. It has been found successful in human tests but as yet, it needs to be perfected before it can be put on the market for general sale.

This item will not make the front page in large headlines but it should because it shows grotesquely the hypocrisy of the modern world as regards morality. Here in America, for example, the people get highly incensed when they hear of venality on the part of public officials. They suffer moral indignation when they hear of private funds. But, here with something that trespasses God's rights and does violence to nature's ways, the fact is met with little attention and an even smaller amount of moral indignation.

The idea that the world will be overpopulated at some time has been kicked about with much solemnity since the half-cocked theory of Malthus broke on the world in 1798. His theory died a natural death but it was brought back to life again under the form of Neo-Malthusianism as exemplified by the "San-geristes". While this is a problem that may some day have to be met, it should be met in the right manner i.e. reclaiming waste land and new methods of food production. To fly in the face of the Natural Law is courting disaster and certainly no way to meet the problem should it ever arise, even if it is the President of Harvard who advocates such a course. God knows there has been and is enough birth prevention (birth control is a misnomer) by mechanical contraception, abortion, and sterilization without the present research aimed solely at frustrating the conjugal act.

The bald fact of the matter is that any sort of artificial birth prevention is a perversion of nature and it was so condemned by Pius XI in the encyclical on Christian Marriage. "Since, therefore, the conjugal act is destined primarily by nature for the begetting of children, those who in exercising it deliberately frustrate its natural power and purpose sin against nature and commit a deed which is shameful and intrinsically vicious". Technology has moved forward at high speed in our time. As regards morals, there is a violent shifting of gears into reverse.

Candidates

Since the political campaigning is now drawing to a close the COWL is having two members of its staff write articles on the presidential candidates and their parties. We hope that the students will then be better equipped to carry out their obligation to vote, which is part of the virtue of patriotism.

It is the hallmark of a true citizen; and this year it is even more imperative that every person who is 21 years of age or over, go to his respective polling place and cast his vote for the candidate of his choice. Therefore, we urge all those students who can, to take advantage of this democratic privilege. Apathy on the part of the electorate breeds poor government.

Memoirs Of British Humorist Termed A Publishing Highlight

One of the highlights of this publishing season will undoubtedly prove to be "The Memoirs of Sean Aloisius O'Feeney Volume Two", which came out last week. Mr. O'Feeney, as you know, is the eminent British humorist, whose "History of the Bombay Bourgeoisie", caused quite a scandal in British social circles back around 1930. It was later made into a motion picture called, "Flying Down to Rio".

If you will recall, the first volume of this series brought us up to 1918, at which time, Mr. O'Feeney forsook his native England and traversed the Irish Sea to the city of Dublin, where he took up residence. As he himself explained, he wanted to "get away from the constricting influences of British urban life, and find re-invigoration in the fields and hillsides of rural Ireland." However, if this really were his objective (many men concur in the opinion that O'Feeney, like Byron, is really an adventurer at heart) he failed utterly to achieve it.

The next year, 1919, was the year in which the Irish rebellion took place; and our author soon found himself in the thick of the battle, but strange to say, on the Nationalist (pro-Irish) side. He played a major role in the immortal Battle of Guinness' Brewery, by the banks of the Liffey. In one of the most trenchant passages in this volume, he states, "The Tans were coming in droves down O'Connell Street, and we were back-tracking toward the river. At one point we were so close to their vanguard, I could distinguish the commands of their officers. I told my men to repair to the Brewery to make a stand, and after they had left, I waited by the bridge." Night came, but evidently ly the Tans had decided not to press their advantage, so O'Feeney rejoined his comrades.

On the following day the siege began in earnest. The enemy surged into the ale cellars and did considerable damage to the produce. One man was reportedly drowned in a vat, but this was entirely unconfirmed, and reliable sources regard it as highly improbable. The defenders successfully routed them from their foothold with a vigorous charge through the malt bins and into the vat area.

Three more charges followed, and, on the third attempt, a break through was finally effected. Most of the defenders were rounded up, but O'Feeney, along with a Dublin barfly named Seamus Martiska, escaped through a window in the rear of the establishment. Eventually he made his way back to England.

There is a host of other equally interesting stories in this collection, but because of the necessary space limitations, all of them cannot be retold. The majority of them deals with O'Feeney's wanderings throughout Europe and Asia during the past twenty years, the people he met, and the places he visited. One of them concerns a Pasha who had a weakness for chop suey. He meets his end in a most horrible way: strangled in chow mein.

O'Feeney also makes incisive and illuminating comments on politics, sports, home economics, and bee keeping, none of which can be overlooked by those interested in these subjects. If you haven't obtained your copy of this work, I would advise you to get it immediately.

Bill Willse's First Radio Berth Obtained By Late Glenn Miller

The leading disc jockey in the New England area is WICE's own Bill Willse. Born in Baltimore, Maryland, Bill started making his name in the entertainment world in Wellesley, Mass. as a Journalism student. It was in this capacity that he teamed up with the late Glenn Miller. It was also while Bill was with 'the Major' that he got his first break on the air. Here's the story in Bill's own words. "We were playing the Hippodrome Ballroom in Baltimore when one night Glenn walked in and said, 'Bill, tomorrow you start working on the radio.' Now, I was surprised, but took the news rather calmly because that's how Glenn was. He did things on the spur of the moment. The next day I went to the station, WITH, in Baltimore, at the time the only twenty-four hour station in the city. To say that I was scared is to put it mildly. That Mike looked at me as if to say, I dare you, go ahead, I dare you. The music came out fine, but man, those commercials. The biggest kick I got that night was when Louis Armstrong walked into the studio and said, 'We'll show 'em, Bill.' Satchmo sat in with me for the rest of the show. That's how it all started."

Bill stayed with WITH for ten years and then came to Providence. He has been at WICE for the past three years. Aside from working in radio, Bill has done scripting for such greats as Bob Chester, the late Jan Savitt, the late Eddie Duchin, and Stan Kenton. He has nothing to say but praise for all the men he has worked with. I asked Bill about his theme 'The Willse Walk', and when he had Dean Hudson cut it. He told me, "Dean and I were sitting in a club one day when Dean said, 'man you walk funny.' I told him that's the way it is, and he said he would cut a theme for me and call it 'The Willse Walk', which he did. Buddy Rich, Ziggy Elman, and Jess Stacey are some of the personnel who worked on the theme, and they are all on the recording that that I use now." Bill also mentioned that Art Mooney is cutting a new theme for Swing Class.

When I asked Bill about his favorites he said, "As for a male vocalist, I think Champ Butler has about the best voice in the trade today. That kid would like to sing opera, and he could do it, too. For all around popularity I think Guy Mitchell is tops. He is honest and sincere and it shows up in his voice. On the female side Fran Warren is the most impressive. She puts her heart and soul in all her work, and that is what can make or break you." Bill did not say that he disliked the Modern Sounds, but he said they have to bested the same as you would the Classics.

When I left Bill for the evening, I had spent a thoroughly enjoyable evening talking to a guy who means every word he says, and is every thing that is great in the entertainment field. This is the world that we find so full of cheap imitators and run down characters, that to meet a personality who has the qualities of a real gentleman, makes you feel good. Bill passed on to me a bit of sound advice that he received from his father, and it is so true today that I'll pass it along to you, "This is the time when we need more than just acquaintances, and the right recipe for finding friends, is to be one."

Eisenhower:

"I am not temperamentally, physically or mentally equipped for the presidency" insisted Mr. Stevenson during the week of the Democratic convention, and I believe this to be absolutely true. While the governor is a fairly capable man, he just isn't the man to be president. I hope to show why in this article.

One of the first things that must be done after the election is to clean up the mess in Washington, which even Adlai admits is there. To do this the next president must be completely free of any influence from Truman, but it seems that Adlai has been taken over completely by Truman, rather than having severed any ties which existed. Harry's influence has so dominated the campaign that the headlines are no longer going to Stevenson but to Truman. Further evidence of this capture is shown by the complete about face which Adlai has taken on the Taft-Hartley Act.

Before the convention Adlai said, "I should recommend modification of the Taft-Hartley Law." Now he says, "It should be completely repealed." He also stated before the nomination, "I feel very strongly this (civil rights) is the responsibility of the States themselves." Today he wants federal control of F.E.P.C. These are just two of the more important about faces that he has taken.

Secondly, Stevenson has surrounded himself with a group of extreme liberals who out-Truman even Harry. Included in this group are his two most important advisers, Wilson Wyatt and Arthur Schlesinger, both prominent A.D.A. figures. Among the others are Archibald MacLeish, Samuel Rosenman and David Ball. Although considered an independent before the convention, Adlai has now shown his true colors.

It is appalling to look around and see the depths to which the Democrats have gone to smear the personality of Ike. Although most of the blame can be put on Truman for his mudslinging tactics, Stevenson has contributed to a certain extent by referring to Ike as the "honorary candidate." For these reasons and others too numerous to elaborate, Stevenson is not the man for the presidency.

—James Marshall

Stevenson:

One of the fundamental facts about a political election is that a party will never have a candidate who is perfect in all respects. What they attempt to do is to nominate a man who will have the greatest appeal to the largest amount of people in their own party, among the independent voters, and if they are optimists, the voters in the rival party. With The General, the Republican Party seemed to have selected the ideal man. He was well known, well liked, a military hero, and a man who had no political past either to haunt or edify him. This was the Eisenhower who returned from Europe. The Eisenhower who is emerging now is somewhat different.

Candidate Eisenhower is still well known, still a military hero, but his political past grows day by day and his stature as saviour of the Republican Party has diminished. He is put forward as the man who is to rescue the country, but as yet the Republicans have to demonstrate that the country is in need of rescuing, and just how The General is to do the task if the electorate gives him the job of President. The General was supposed to have signaled the birth of a new Republican Party, but the progress of the campaign does not lead one to believe that a regeneration has taken place in the ranks of the GOP. There is still a vacuum at the top of the Party. This dearth of leadership was to have been solved by The General because he was to be the man above partisan factions. Such is not the case, however. There is still Taft, Dewey, and McCarthy who have their own cohorts and their own commitments, so we see the awkward spectacle of a candidate trying to please three separate parts of the same organization. This is indeed a difficult task.

The General also seems to have tripped over the matter of issues. Perhaps there is a certain degree of naivete to his lack of knowledge, but his ignorance at times is disarming and certainly does not stand him in good stead. His lack of knowledge about the McCarran immigration law, the difference between the union shop and the closed shop, and the nature of the Texas tidelands oil dispute are difficult to explain away. When the campaign started The General stated that the only real issue that was facing the voters was one of war and peace, in other words, foreign policy. This issue seems to have gone by the boards, because the General has found the "mess in Washington".

Meanwhile, Stevenson began the campaign with the handicap of not being well known, but this disadvantage is rapidly disappearing as he moves among the people.

Gym Construction Begins Today

Coatesmen Journey To Kingston To Meet Unbeaten Rams Friday

When the Providence College harriers travel to Kingston next Friday, the unbeaten Rams will be trying to avenge their defeat of last year at the hands of Johnson, Lohner and company.

Providence College's hill and dalers, who lost their first meet to top rated Army, are going all out for this race which will put them in the lead as far as the cross-country series between the two schools is concerned. Each team has one win apiece.

Last year P.C., led by Dick Lee, who placed second, won the event by the score of 26 to 30. In the first encounter between the two teams, the Rams won 23 to 32, although Friar Captain "Pop" Johnson came in first.

R.I.U. overcame Fordham in their first meet and displayed such men as Tremblay, Negris, Smith and the Conde brothers who will be among the top contenders for first place.

Coach Harry Coates' probable starters will include Johnson, Chris Lohner, Bill Hennigan, Dick Tiernan, Herb Waters, Paul Methia and Len Riley.

The winners of this meet will be a strong contender for the New England title since R. I. hill and dalers are a top section in this event.

P. C. will return to Hendrickson Field to meet Holy Cross one week from Friday.

Worcester County Club Elects Ed Sughrue Prexy

The Worcester County Club met recently to elect officers for the coming year.

Ed Sughrue was elected president; William Reidy, vice-president; Bob Bergquist, secretary; and Fred O'Neil, treasurer.

Following the election, plans were formulated for a Freshman welcoming party to be sponsored jointly with the Metropolitan Club and Western Mass. Club. The possibility of attending the Holy Cross-Boston College game was also discussed.

Intramural League Begins Third Week

By Bill Flanagan

The Intramural Football League swings into its third week of action and already the teams are coming into their own. Under the direction of Mr. Larry Drew, the Intramural League has become a popular pastime among the student body.

In some of last week's big games the Worcester Club defeated Sr. Science 25-13, Providence the Bootleggers 25-20, Conn. Yankees the N. E. All Stars 33-14 and Cranston the Kent County 19-7.

In next week's games Worcester plays Fr. Biology, Providence the Jr. Arts, Conn. Yankees the Sr. Science and N. E. All Stars the Greater Boston Club.

While on the subject of Intramurals it might be interesting to note that the winner of the Intramural Cross Country Race of Oct 7, was Bernie Dandely in 9:40. Second was Bob Prairie, and third was Paul Lareau.

Bowab, Asciolla Named Co-Chairmen Of Soph Hop

Leonard J. Riley, sophomore class president, announced the appointment of John Bowab and Paul J. Asciolla as co-chairmen of the Soph hop committee at a meeting held yesterday. Attending the meeting were the class officers, Gerald Romberg, Charles Gnys, Robert Melucci, the class moderator, Rev. John J. Mahony, O.P., and a group of students who have been tentatively appointed to the committee. Mr. Riley has asked for sincerely interested sophomores to assist on the committee. They may submit their names to either the officers or to Father Mahoney.

Varsity Basketball Schedule Revealed At Athletic Office

By Martin Sandler

Providence College will inaugurate its 1952-1953 Varsity basketball season on December 3rd, it was announced by Father Begley, Director of Athletics. The Friars will meet Gorham State as its first opponent at the Mt. Pleasant gym. The teachers from Maine are one of three new teams appearing on this year's schedule. The Cuddy-men will also come up against Maryland State College and Manhattan College for the first time.

The Manhattan game at the R. I. Auditorium should be one of the high spots of the season. The Jesters, led by Providence's own Andy McGowan, should sport one of the strongest teams in the nation.

This year's schedule also includes a home and away series with such annual opponents as Fairfield, Springfield, and St. Anselm's College.

For the second year, the Friars will tangle with Brandeis University. This game which will take place in Waltham on December 17th, should really be a honey. The judges boast one of the strongest squads in New England and will be out to avenge last season's loss to the Cuddy-men.

On January 10, the Friars will make their annual journey to Worcester where they will meet Holy Cross College. The Crusaders will definitely field one of the nation's strongest clubs, and in all probability will be sure bets to retain their New England supremacy. P. C. will be shooting to better their last year's performance against the Cross when they scored no less than seventy-seven points.

On Feb. 7th the Cuddy-men will play host to Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. The Tech-men seem to have found the knack of coming up with a strong club every year. Last season they had an excellent record including a win over highly regarded Fordham University.

Of course, the high point of the season will be reached in the four games with R. I. U. and Brown. The Friars will be out after their first Rhode Island Collegiate Basketball title in many a moon.

Huge Two Story Plant Will Cost $1,500,000

Construction of a new $1,500,000 gymnasium at Providence College began today on the campus, in the drill field, behind Donnelly Hall the Very Reverend Robert J. Slavin, O.P., president, announced.

Horne Outlines New Executive Methods

The new Junior Class president is Richard V. Horne of 169 School Street, Pawtucket. Assisting Horne in the governing of the class of '54 will be James W. Dillon of New Haven, as vice-president; William L. Reardon of Milldale, Conn.; and Eugene P. Coyle of Saylesville, as secretary and treasurer, respectively.

Horne's policy will be as follows: First, "there will be systemized spending accomplished by a class budget. A committee headed by Gene Hanley, a business administration student, will be assigned to draw up a sound financial budget." Second, "records of class spending will be kept. These records will be handled by Michael Filippelli who will be directly responsible to Gene Coyle," third, "There will be open class meetings to which all members of the class will be invited, fourth, "Previous class records will be used as a guide for some of this year's functions."

The president-elect would like to start the ball rolling with the planning of the Junior Prom. Mr. Horne would like those people who have any preference for the date of the prom to submit their requests and to be ready to state, if requested, the reasons for these preferences.

In Edinburgh there's a prudent man who talks through his nose to save wear and tear on his teeth.

The long-anticipated building will fill a large gap in the college's facilities for varsity and intramural indoor sports.

The 235 by 190 foot structure will be two stories high, concrete block with red brick facing and limestone trim. A great arch over the main gymnasium will have a clear span of 150 feet with a glass roof 45 feet above the center of the floor for day lighting.

Eggers & Higgins of New York are the architects, and Fanning & Doorley Construction of Providence the builders.

The main floor will be large enough to handle the varsity basketball court plus three intramural courts. The gym will seat 2441 persons on the main floor and 1658 in the balcony. Surrounding the area will be offices, coaches rooms, exercise rooms, lockers, showers, and storage areas.

The ground floor will house nine rifle ranges, a laundry and a barber shop. Here also is an unusual facility for a gymnasium: a large student lounge with a glass front overlooking the campus, a cafeteria, soda-fountain and a recreation room.

Above the main lobby will be rooms for the ROTC headquarters, and alumni office. The building will face the present parking lot in the rear of Harkins Hall.

SPIKED SHOE MEETING

There will be a meeting of the Spiked Shoe Club today at 3:30 p. m., in Room 208 of Harkins Hall. All students are invited to attend this session. Plans for the coming Harvest dance will be discussed.

Glee Club Comprises Forty-Five Members

The Friars Glee Club, composed of forty-five male voices under the leadership of Rev. Leo S. Cannon, O.P., will give a benefit concert on Monday evening, November 10, at De La Salle Academy, Newport, R. I.

This concert will be the club's second appearance of the current season. On September 29, the P. C. choristers sang at the Mass of the Holy Ghost in the War Memorial Grotto. The Newport appearance for the academy's Scholarship Fund will mark the club's first public appearance.

Dick Lederer, president of the Glee Club, and Father Cannon have planned a series of concerts for the club which will bring them into Newport, Boston, New York and possibly Washington, D. C.

The Rev. Charles B. Quirk, O.P., moderator of the group, furthered Mr. Brott's remarks by stating the present need for more Catholic students in graduate work.

Henry James, president of the club conducted election of other officers to the club. Those elected were William Gilroy, Vice-President; Jerry Kirby, Secretary, and Robert Delaney, Treasurer.

matters which they desired to have cleared up among themselves.

The next question concerned the ring question: why the Student Congress appoints the ring committee and why seniors were selected for it. It was explained to those in attendance that the Seniors were appointed to aid and advise the Juniors in their selection of a class ring.

Appointing Ring Committee

Mr. Horn, Junior class president, interposed at this point to advise the group that the Junior class would make the selection of the ring and that he is appointing a committee for that purpose. He further stated that he welcomes and solicits the aid and advice of the congress. Robert Bergquist asked if there would be a vote by the Junior class as to the ring selection. Mr. Horn replied that he had appointed a committee but that if the class desired a vote they would have it.

A brief discussion of prom bids and who had authority to decide whether there should be free bids was settled when it was explained that the decision was up to the classes and that the congress did not intervene in such matters.

"Cowl" Is Attacked

Then All Lamy, Senior class president, openly denounced the Cowl for what he claimed was backing certain candidates in the class elections through an editorial appearing in the Cowl election issue. Mr. Lamy pointed out that he thought that the Cowl had no right to ask the candidates how they stood on certain issues. He further stated that much of the confusion which prompted a student committee for action was instigated by the editorials appearing in the Cowl.

Len Riley, Sophomore president, followed Mr. Lamy by stating that he was at first reluctant to answer the questions put forth, but when he found that these questions were being asked of all the candidates, he thought the idea was a good one and welcomed the opportunity to publicly state his stand on the issues. He further stated that he thought that the editorial was out of place and it could have formed public opinion.

ARTHUR CORVESE IS MARRIED

Arthur Corverse, a junior Education major, was married to the former Miss Rose Di Pompeo on Monday morning in St. Ann's Church. The Rev. Arthur T. Ferrara, assistant pastor, performed the ceremony.

first, which dealt with the Student Congress' setting a limit to the size of social committees, was answered predominantly in the negative, by a count of 356 to 171. The second in this group, "Do you think the Student Congress should set a maximum of rewards (i.e. free bids, etc.) that a dance committee could receive?" was also answered in a negative manner. The tally was 335 to 205.

Thumbs Down on Absentees

On the most lopsided score of the entire survey, the students turned thumbs down, 450 to 97, on allowing Student Congress members who miss over 25% of the meetings, to run for any office in subsequent years.

The replies to the poll's final question, "Do you believe that a central governing body should be established for the college's regional clubs?" were: yes, 130; no, 342.

NOSE, THROAT,

and Accessory Organs not Adversely Affected by Smoking Chesterfields

FIRST SUCH REPORT EVER PUBLISHED ABOUT ANY CIGARETTE

A responsible consulting organization has reported the results of a continuing study by a competent medical specialist and his staff on the effects of smoking Chesterfield cigarettes.

A group of people from various walks of life was organized to smoke only Chesterfields. For six months this group of men and women smoked their normal amount of Chesterfields—10 to 40 a day. 45% of the group have smoked Chesterfields continually from one to thirty years for an average of 10 years each.

At the beginning and at the end of the six-months period each smoker was given a thorough examination, including X-ray pictures, by the medical specialist and his assistants. The examination covered the sinuses as well as the nose, ears and throat.

The medical specialist, after a thorough examination of every member of the group, stated: "It is my opinion that the ears, nose, throat and accessory organs of all participating subjects examined by me were not adversely affected in the six-months period by smoking the cigarettes provided."
